The Little Stocks Rejoice
Common Sense Signs
No More Song? Nonsense
The Eugenists Mean Well

By Arthur Brisbane
(Copyright, 1925, by Star Co.)

Practically all the little stocks, about their heads and necks, and for the closing hour of the Stock Exchange yesterday, as violets and pansies lift up their heads after a shower.

What it was that made the stocks feel so cheered, you may decide for yourself. It was complete foolishness that made so many get rid of good railroad stocks at low prices, merely because the St. Paul road went into the hands of a receiver.

IN HIGH FINANCE things are managed by high finance. And next to making a railroad pay big dividends the most profitable thing you can do is turn it into a receivership. A railroad in a receivership is like a chicken cooking on the stove. It's good news for somebody.

A STATEMENT by Austen Chamberlain, the British Foreign Secretary, regarding the security of France and other European nations, indicates that common sense and equity are gradually reasserting themselves in Europe.

That Europe's questions cannot be on forever competing against each other in armaments, or coalitions built up one against another, is becoming clear.

THE BRITISH ARE the most practical, the French the most logical of European nations. The German, Italian, Poles, Greeks and Russians realize, because they can't help realizing it, that war does not pay. It ruins the vanquished and bankrupts the victors.

THE CHOICE OF EUROPE now is some common argument that would give a chance for peaceful development to all of the nations, Germany and Austria included, or continuation of the struggle for supremacy in armaments and population, that must inevitably result in such disaster as the world has never seen.

The sensible speech by the British Foreign Secretary, and is welcome in France, by all except a very bitter minority, are hopeful signs.

PROFESSOR THOROLD, scientific German musician, credits opera with orchestra to human singing, to human voices. Opera is growing too big for the human voice, and it can no longer do justice to the emotional quality of musical genius. So says the professor, and it may be so. But if the professor imagines that any orchestra can sing the human voice in the human voice, he is mistaken. He is mistaken.

A PLAIN LITTLE GIRL with a simple little voice singing songs and songs of "Joany" can't do all that a bawling, whining, fiddling orchestra can do. But that simple voice CAN do things that the orchestra can't do, and never will.

Therefore, young ladies taking singing lessons, don't worry. Patti or Jenny Lind will always find a job.

IN NEW YORK CITY, associated high brow, physicians, psychologists, eugenists, sociologists, many of them from abroad, are discussing birth control.

The question is how to enable the mother to regulate and control the size of her family. "Who but the mother has a right to say what size the family shall be?" asks the birth control advocate.

SUCH QUESTIONS are important. Some believe that war would end if fewer children were born. That's nonsense. War starts in the brains of a few, not in the minds of the dull mass. If anybody imagines that the Japanese weren't part of "allies" in the "allies" of thirty millions instead of thirty million Japanese, doesn't know human nature.

THE EUGENISTS in the birth-control convention plan for a later race by "artificial selection."

Venire Exhausted; Chapman Jury Incomplete

BANDIT LAUGHS AS PROSPECTIVE JUROR ASKS ABOUT MEALS

By BEST FORD.

Hartford, March 26.—In the search for the twelfth and last juror to complete the panel that will pass upon the fate of Gerald Chapman, super-outlaw, charged with murder of a policeman, the third special venire of thirty taleasmen summoned today was exhausted without producing a citizen satisfactory to both sides.

Judge Neville Jennings was authorized to adjourn court to permit summoning of twenty other citizens of Hartford in the effort to fill the vacancy and get under way with the actual trial.

The red brick courthouse was besieged with men and women spectators today eager to catch a glimpse of the Charles River bandit, a Church of England, said-famous young man who has been likened to a "modern Jesse James."

Next to the annual difficulty experienced in completing the jury was the most disagreeable development of the third day of the trial was a report, given credence in police circles that "Mrs. Reeves," the mystery woman friend of Chapman in Providence, who exchanged letters with him after the $240,000 mail truck robbery in New York, is his married wife.

The authorities, despite their best efforts, failed to find a juror to complete the jury.

LONE WOLF'S BRIDE

MRS. IRENE WALTERS writes her own story of visit to husband, the terror of Back Bay, in Charles Street Jail, where he warned her to stop talking, stay in nights and not worry about him. She insists she does not believe he is guilty though he told her he was—positively.

Girl Wife's Own Story of Her Visit to Bandit in City Prison and How He Told Her He Was Guilty

Little Mrs. Irene Walters, girl-bride of the Wolf combed out her bobbed locks, dried her eyes, powdered her nose and sat down at a typewriter to tell her own tale for the Boston Evening American, of her visit to her husband in Charles Street Jail today.

By MRS. IRENE WALTERS.
I don't exactly know her night—every time the clock struck the hour I'd sit up in bed and think of Jim in jail—and it seemed like a bad dream.

When they came to take him yesterday morning I thought first that was the insurance man—but when the insurance man came and then the policeman, escorted by three plain from the regular army, three constables from the navy and three National Guard aircraft, made his appearance over the basin at 10:30.

The army and navy plain performed a few stunts for the edification of the throng, and then the demonstration aircraft swept down toward West Boston bridge. "Cycling," Lieutenant Austin then straightened out his ship and went up the river toward Harvard bridge as a preliminary workout.

The officers had to take me from him—and I was sobbing so hard I nearly fainted.

This morning early, as soon as I awoke up, I thought I'd go right up to jail and see Jim before everybody could bother me. I hadn't seen him since the officers took him away and told me he was the Lone Wolf.

GOES BY TROLLEY CAR.
So I took the Dudley street trolley—and nearly got lost before I found the jail. Of course I had never been there before, because, though I was born in Boston, I've lived in New Hampshire, in the country. I was a little girl, and only came back to Boston this September to live.

"Mr. Walters—the Lone Wolf," the officer at the desk said and that I asked for Jim. "You're sure you want Mr. James Walters?"

"Yes," I said. "I'm Mrs. Walters."

You see, I thought last night and I was awake long enough to do a lot of thinking—that I wouldn't be ashamed of Jim, and that I would stick to him to the last ditch. So I kept my head up and said, "Yes, I want to see Mr. Walters if I possibly can."

Well, I said, I said worriedly, "You shouldn't have come up here."

"I had to," I sobbed, "I couldn't sleep a wink last night and I had to see him," you were and if it was true.

He was just as handsome as the picture on the left.

GIRL WIFE WEEPS IN ARMS OF LONE WOLF IN CITY JAIL

In the library of the city prison, James E. Walters, the Lone Wolf, and his 19-year-old bride, met today for the first time since his arrest at his home, No. 5 Wendell street, South Boston, as Boston's "Boudoir Bandit."

The simple, unsophisticated country girl, Mrs. Irene Scott Walters, clung to her husband, protesting between sobs that she loved him still and would stick to him.

The presence of a Boston Evening American reporter, who witnessed the reunion, the little wife declared her faith in Walters, and trusted she did not believe the stories told about him.

The Lone Wolf greeted the young wife casually, and, his air of bravado gone, exchanged but a few words with her.

They embraced, and Walters remarked that he had slept well.

"I didn't," said his bride, smiling ruefully through her tears. Her eyes were red and swollen from weeping.

"You must get sleep," Walters commanded. Then he proceeded to issue a few matter of fact instructions.

"Stay in nights," he cautioned, "and don't say anything. Get some clean clothes and come back again Saturday. I've written to my mother at Richmond, Va., and asked her to come here, but I don't know if she will or not."

"This is a pretty good place," Walters continued, his self-assurance returning. "I'm getting along all right. Goodbye now."

That was all.

The wife, still in tears, was ushered out of the prison, and Walters was returned to the cell where he resumed his reading of the newspaper.

MRS. WALTERS LACKS MONEY.
Mrs. Walters asked the Boston Evening American representative that she doesn't know what to do. "I have no money," she wailed, "and I can't get a job now. I was a waitress in Portsmouth, but I was discharged."

BOSTONIANS SEE SMOKE SCREEN LAID

Thousands of Greater Bostonians today witnessed for the first time the laying down of a smoke screen by an airplane.

While crowds thronged both banks of the Charles River, a Church of England, said-famous young man who has been likened to a "modern Jesse James."

The success of the demonstration was somewhat marred by a high wind, which persisted in blowing the smoke over to Charles street to the great annoyance of housewives who have no interest in scientific experiments of that nature.

CHELSEA GIRL WINS DIVORCE IN PARIS

A divorce was granted today in Paris by the Seine tribunal, to Mrs. Mabel Kilpatrick, formerly of Chelsea, from her husband, William Denest Kilpatrick.

Mrs. Kilpatrick was formerly Miss Mabel Cromer, who was married to Kilpatrick in Boston by the Rev. John McG. Foster, Back Bay minister, on April 27, 1909. Kilpatrick, a native of England, was an actor, twenty-five years old, and Miss Cromer was nineteen.

DYNAMITE RIVER FOR BODY OF ELOPER

Newport, Vt., March 26.—Dynamite was used today on the bed of the Barton River, in an attempt to bring up the body of Charles Huthlin, married sweetheart of Edith Young, factory girl, believed to have died with him in a clandestine love tryst.

The 24-year-old Orleans girl's body was found in the river, where it had been trapped under the ice for four months following their setting out on a buggy ride.

Heavy charges of dynamite were exploded under direction of Sheriff Hall, who has been conducting the search for Huthlin's body.

The postmortem examination that he believed the couple to have met died accidentally but that indication of a crime was evident. was made today by Attorney-General Frank D. Archibald, who, with While her husband and son were cooking breakfast today, Mrs. Emma Roberts, fifty, of No. 263 Shawmut avenue, rose from her bed and jumped or fell two stories from her bedroom window.

She died a short time after being taken to the City Hospital, where she was found to have suffered internal injuries and a compound fracture of the left arm.

The Roberts apartment is at the corner of the Shawmut avenue house, with the windows facing into a court.

FIVE HURT AS HEAVY FOG CAUSES CRASHES

Five persons were injured today in trolley car and automobile accidents directly due to the heavy fog which blanketed the coast during the early forenoon.

A woman trolley car and another car collided at Marlborough. Mrs. Morris of Bay avenue, Clifton, the operator, was seriously injured. Three passengers were shaken and bruised and treated by family physician.

"STAY IN NIGHTS; DON'T TALK," SAYS LONE WOLF TELLS HER HE IS GETTING ALONG WELL BEHIND PRISON BARS

"That's kind that I had a job, and came to Boston last September."

"At breakfast in the South Boston home, with Mrs. Walters' sister, Mrs. James McDonald, and Mary, a small child, present, the birds were unable to eat."

"I'm so nervous," she whispered, "I can't sleep, but I don't feel that way today. I love my husband and believe in him. I shall stick to him and hold my head high."

"I was so surprised when the police came yesterday. When the bell rang I thought it was an insurance man. Then they took Jimmie away in handcuffs. I wanted to die."

"I was just like a couple of kids together."

"On the way to the prison, Mrs. Walters abominably started to walk under a ladder, but suddenly checked herself and went around, remarking:

"That's bad luck, and I've got enough bad luck now."

"I'm afraid everyone is looking at me," she declared at another time during the journey.

"Mrs. Walters stated that she believed her husband to be an engineer on a freight train, although yesterday she stated said she understood he was employed as coal barger."

Lone Wolf's Wife Shuns Ladder of 'Ill Luck'

On her way to the City Prison to visit her husband, the Lone Wolf, Mrs. Irene Scott Walters refused to pass under a ladder. Checking her steps and walked around the ladder, remarking apologetically: "That's bad luck, and I've got enough bad luck now."

Walters' attitude today was far different from that of yesterday, when she posed for photographers and impressed hardened jail attendants with her equanimity.

Walters stops "talking."

"Today he declared he was all through talking,"

"From now on," he declared, "my lawyers will do all the talking for me."

Sheriff John A. Kellier and Deputy Sheriff John A. Morgan have taken every precaution to see that the Lone Wolf's life is protected during his stay in the jail. He is constantly under guard, and his every movement is watched.

Officials who have come in contact with him declare he is much the same type as James Murphy, the famous convict whose repudiated confession of the A. & P. store manager murder resulted in his discharge.

Walters demanded all the newspapers, declaring: "There'll be plenty about me in the papers. I want to read them all."

TESTED BY ALIENIST.

He has been examined by Doctors Stearns, Chalmers and Thoms, all of whom were appointed by the court and the third by his counsel. Their report will be filed with District Attorney O'Brien today, and immediate action thereafter is expected.

In addition to his wife, the Lone Wolf has two callers today, although one changed his mind at the last minute. The first who presented himself at the jail gave his name as Harry Allen of Norfolk, claiming to be an attorney.

The second was a man who said he had been a shipmate of Walters in the navy, and that he had been taken from the prison with the idea of helping the Lone Wolf. After talking with newspapermen and reading the

Lone Wolf's Loot Shows He Had Eye for Value

That James E. Walters, the "Lone Wolf," who was arrested in his home Wednesday, selected, with an eye to value, the most taken from the apartments of the women he terrified, is shown, police say, by the assortment of clothing and jewelry held at headquarters for identification by their owners.

Among the articles being held for claimants at police headquarters are:

A long, squirrel wrap, trimmed with monkey fur, value $500.

One three-quarter length mink coat, value $200.

A salmon-colored cloth coat with mink collar, value $120.

A fawn-colored silk dress.

One black silk dress with coral trimmings.

One woman's Reliance watch.

One man's Elgin watch with hunting case.

One diamond ring.

Wolf's Bride Stripped of Stolen Finery

All her finery, pilfered from Duke Day homes, stripped from her by police officers, Mrs. "Jim" Walters, heiress of the Lone Wolf, today wears a modest blue crepe dress brightened only by white collar and cuffs.

"They took everything that Jim gave me," she said sorrowfully. "My mink coat, my rings, my lovely silk underwear—everything!"

The only other dress I have is a dark silk one which I am going to leave for the trail."

"I haven't anything to wear now—but it doesn't make any difference. If it wasn't for my sister and my little niece, Mary, I don't know what I'd do."

Feeling the disgrace keenly that shadows their home, young Mrs. Walters and her sister, Mrs. James McDonald, almost refuse to be parted from each other.

"When Irene steps out of the house for a minute now I'm as nervous as cat as being worried over her," Mrs. McDonald confessed. "I look the door and won't let anyone come in till she comes home."

But the little three-year-old niece, Mary McDonald, giggles and laughs and calls for "Uncle Jim."

"Where are you going, Irene?" asked little Mary as the young wife stood in the doorway of No. 5 Woking street, preparing to venture a visit to her husband. "Going to see Uncle Jim!"

"Yes, Mary," said Mrs. Walters, sadly. "I'll be right back."

"Bring him Jim," said little Mary. "He's been gone a long time."

And the wife of the dreaded Lone Wolf, clad in a shabby brown coat and plain little hat—her luxurious gown and wraps a thing of the past—started out to cheer her husband.

BRIDE'S STORY

Walters was first seized while he was in the car. "Don't start that! I've done it all—and we'll just have to walk and see what I get."

He told me to stay in nights and not to see people and that everything would come out in the trial. He said he was afraid he would get "it" for it, though.

"DON'T WORRY," HE SAID, "I don't worry," he said, "Take care of yourself—and don't come back until Saturday."

"They said some woman came to identify you last night," I said. "Was that true?"

"Just to identify me—kid," he said. "I don't know about that. Now go home—and send me some clean shirts."

"But your mother, Jim—does she know about this? Shall I send her a telegram?"

"No, I've taken care of mother," said Jim. "I wrote her in Richmond, Virginia—last night. I don't know if she'll come up for the trial or not—but she'll know about it through the papers before she gets the letter I guess."

"Guess—just better, can't you see? It isn't a bad place here—and I don't worry about it."

"But you kissed me and they took him away."

"Not very talkative this morning—just a little bit. I was a great talker. I think, kid, he's one of the smoothest customers that have come in."

But whatever they say about Jim I know Jim going to be a great success. I would have said for a better business.

And as for being famous—I would have known it if he had been a guess—and I refuse to believe that.

If he does get "it"—I don't know what I'll do. I'm going to hope so. I'm at a restaurant in Boston—but I don't have the heart to hunt for news now with all this trouble about Jim!

WAINWRIGHT

Chapter IV.

ALTHOUGH it was the custom of the Gould family for the children to spend virtually all of their lives in the open, it must not be supposed that they did not undergo a regular and assiduous form of education. Next to our health, our parents considered the question of education as paramount.

"There is no excuse in the world," my mother used to remark, "for people that are well off to neglect the benefits and joys of education. The greatest blessing that wealth brings is the power to absorb knowledge."

Of all the various branches of learning, my mother considered foreign languages the most important. As we grew up and traveled abroad and mingled here with visitors of distinction from other countries her wisdom became more and more manifest.

From my own point of view, I am convinced that a wide dissemination of a knowledge of foreign languages among all nationalities would do more than anything else to bring about the fellowship of nations.

From our earliest childhood we had foreign governesses who taught us their own particular tongue. In general supervision of education was Miss Caroline Curtis, who, although ten or fifteen years older than my mother, had been her childhood friend in Brooklyn.

Miss Curtis, on a visit to our home, made some suggestions as to how the education of the children should be arranged and my mother was so pleased with her ideas that she requested her to remain with us and become the generalissimo of the army of governesses and tutors.

Miss Curtis, endowed with considerable executive ability, discharged her duties as best she could under the handicap of a Mid-Victorian outlook on life. Today she probably realizes that some of the tenets to which she so persistently clung during our childhood have been thoroughly outmoded and that education is now conducted upon more liberal principles.

'TAX REDUCERS' HELD FOR U. S.

OFFERED TO 'FX' RETURNS

Two Former Income Division Employees and Recent Auditor Are Under Arrest

New Haven, Ct., March 26.—John F. McCarron, of 1314 Eleventh street, and James J. Clifford, both of Washington, D. C., were held until Saturday a fugitives today, before which time both are expected to be returned to Washington.

Police say the two were wanted there in connection with a conspiracy to defraud the government of large sums in taxes.

Both men, who were arrested in Milford, Ct., and brought here, have agreed to waive extradition and return to the national capital.

Police here understood that the case under investigation involved frauds amounting to millions of dollars, which are alleged to have been perpetrated through collusion with an auditor in the income tax division of the Internal Revenue Department.

According to the police here McCarron and Clifford were, until two years ago, employees of the income tax division of the revenue department, but resigned and went about the country representing themselves as "income tax experts" offering to have income taxes of large corporations and individuals reduced.

The two, according to the police, approached officials of the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad, with the proposition, and through these officials, who reported the matter to Washington, the arrests were made here. The men were dining at an inn on the Milford Turnpike when taken into custody.

Washington, March 26.—Frederick Sutherland, an auditor in the Bureau of Internal Revenue, has been arrested here in connection with alleged attempts to reduce taxes by misrepresentation. His arrest followed that of James J. Clifford and John F. McCarron, alleged "tax reducers" caught at Milford, Ct.

Clifford and McCarron were taken into custody after Joseph D. Brady, connected with the New Haven Rail-

SHIP TO ROAM SEAS FOR BROMINE SUPPLY

New York, March 26.—The steamship Ethyl, formerly the Lake Harbina of the United States Shipping Board, will sail April 15 from Wilmington, Del., on what is described as "probably the strangest voyage ever undertaken by a vessel of commerce"—to extract bromine from the ocean.

A world shortage of bromine, which "threatens to hit both industry and science," caused the Ethyl to be fitted out as a factory for recovering bromine from the sea water.

Chemical experts who are members of the American Chemical Society estimate that each 1,700 gallons of sea water contains one pound of bromine.

Concord Stamps Go On Sale April 4

Washington, March 26.—The special series of three postage stamps to commemorate the 150th anniversary of the battle of Lexington and Concord will be placed on sale April 4. On the same day the new half-cent Nathan Hale stamp will be offered to the public.

The Lexington-Concord stamps will be sold first at Boston, Concord, Concord Junction, Lexington and Cambridge.

The Lexington-Concord issue shows: One-cent, green, Washington at Cambridge; two-cent, red, battle of Lexington and Concord; five-cent, blue, "The Minute Man," reproducing the statue of the Minute Man at Concord.

GUIDED 19 YEARS BY 'SPIRIT' OF EMPLOYER

Easthampton, Ct., March 26.—Herbert Lyman, farmhand, claims to have labored for nineteen years without pay and to have been in spiritual communication with Mrs. Phoebe Simmons, his employer, since her death.

He has brought suit against Harlan G. Hills, postmaster and administrator of Mrs. Simmons' estate, claiming $4,000 for the nineteen years' wages.

Lyman refused to leave the Simmons farm after the death of his employer, charging that in her spirit communications Mrs. Simmons had commanded him to remain.

A suit to end him from the premises was tried before a justice of the peace and jury a month ago, but the jury disagreed and the case was adjourned and is still pending.

Melton to Take Trip

Washington, March 26.—Secretary Melton plans to leave for Bermuda Saturday for a brief vacation, accompanied by his son Paul and several of Paul's school boy friends.

WALTHAM GIRL QUILTS ART FOR LOVE

Alice Bertha McNamara of Waltham was perfectly satisfied with her chosen career as magazine illustrator, until she met Walter J. Love, Cambridge civil engineer and Tufts College graduate. Now everything is changed and the young people are to be married in St. Mary's Church, Waltham, on April 16.

GILCHRIST CO.

Men's and Young Men's

Two-Trouser
SUITS

$35

- new English and conservative style suits!
- fine woollens, worsted and silk stripes!
- greys, browns, powder blues, London lavenders!
- regular, short, stout and long sizes!

Superlatives and exaggeration never convinced a man more than an actual inspection. We are so enthusiastic about this splendid showing of fine clothes that it's hard for us to "keep down to earth"—enough to say that here is the Spring suit you've been waiting for—priced as low as a quality garment can be to give the style and service you expect!

One-Trouser Suits

The same high grade workmanship—the same splendid variety in style and material that are to be found in the higher priced suits—but only one pair of trousers! There is a style for every taste and a fit for every man. Priced to enable every man to be "spruced up" for Spring.

---style features

There's a decided difference in the clothes the well groomed man will wear this Spring—wider shoulders, coats that fit more snugly 'round the hips. These decided differences along with wider trousers that hang straight from the waist are to be found in the "style right" clothes of Gilchrist's.

WIFE ACCUSES HUSBAND OF BEATING HER

"The best one with a hot poker and I couldn't live on spaghetti all the time," was the pathetic plea of Mrs. Lillian Caragliano in a suit for separate support from her husband, Luigi Caragliano.

The sixteen-year-old wife said that on several occasions her husband slapped her in the face and before her child was born, gave her a particularly severe beating. This she endured until December, 1924, when he hit her on the eye with a hot poker after which she took her child and went home to her mother.

Caragliano, on the stand, denied that he ever hit his wife, but admitted that once he just gave her a "little slap" following which she had him arrested for assault.

HUNT FOR BROTHER OF DUNCAN SISTERS

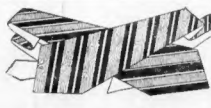

Los Angeles, March 24.—Harold Duncan, 23-year-old brother of the Dancing Duncan Sisters, Tony and Eva, is missing. Another brother living here says that young Duncan and his bride started on March 21 to drive from Yuma, Ariz., to this city and nothing has been heard from them. They were coming from Chicago by automobile with a police dog. Sheriffs between here and Yuma have been asked to report whether the Duncans have passed through their localities.

MAN KILLS SELF ON RELATIVES' GRAVES

Central Bridge, N. Y., March 26.—The body of Levilla Griffin, sixty-four, president of the Schenectady Insuring Agency of Schenectady, was found strangled across the graves of his mother and daughter in the cemetery of Governor's Corners, near here, today. Investigating authorities returned a verdict of suicide.

PATROLMAN FREED IN MANSLAUGHTER CASE

New York, March 25.—Patrolman Hagan was acquitted of a charge of manslaughter in the first degree by a general sessions jury after three hours' deliberation.

Hagan was accused of having shot and killed Leo Vias, seven years old, while the boy was playing in a vacant house on July 14. Hagan admitted that he fired at the house to scare away intruders, but said that he had no idea that the child was in the house or had been struck by a bullet.

WEST END HOUSE TO HAVE 19TH ANNUAL DANCE

The West End House of Boston will have its nineteenth annual dance on Friday evening, March 27, at the State Ballroom. A gala program has been arranged including a battle of music between Morey Pearl and his Brunswick recording artists and Bert Lowe with his Society Orchestra.

The proceeds of this dance will go toward seedling worthy West End boys to the West End House Camp at East Parsonfield, Me.

idea," which would mean picking the right husband for the right wife.

You can do that with cows, horses, etc. But with them you only breed a body. Among human beings you produce that very mysterious thing called a soul, and that's different.

You might marry a John L. Sullivan to a Hyacinth, or a Michel Angelo to the Venus of Milo, and be bitterly disappointed in results.

On the other hand, a tall, fierce country girl, Nancy Hanks, probably unable to read or write, marries a local n'er do well, and the result is Abraham Lincoln. The Lord seems to reserve for himself certain problems.

BALFOUR is in Jerusalem—and to show disapproval Arabs and a majority of the orthodox Jews close their shops and organize an anti-Balfour strike, or boycott.

The Arabs object to Balfour because it was he who gave Jerusalem back to the Jews. You can understand that.

But it is hard for the uninitiated to understand the rage against Balfour shown by the orthodox Jewish party. But for the action of Great Britain, upon-sored by Balfour, the Jews would not be in control of Palestine now with Sir Herbert Samuel, a Jew, as high commissioner, in charge. And it is the British name, the British army, and British airplanes in the background that cause the Arabs to hesitate about massacring Jews, whom they outnumber ten to one.

However, it will all come out right eventually, for no one doubts for one moment that justice prevails.

THE BRITISH are practical and their common sense delights you. For instance, an American over there has been making money by psycho-analysis.

He had important friends and backers, including the Bishop of Liverpool and Lady Betty Joffe. But that didn't keep him from going to jail for a month, with an order to get out of England when he gets out of jail.

ONE LADY HAD given the psycho-analyst $2,000. Another wrote him a letter signed "The Devil," so the British justice department classed the psycho-analyst as a charlatan, and out he goes.

He will find a fat field waiting for him here. Our people like humbugs and pay them well. If they are first class of their kind.

MONTREAL IS AMERICA'S GREATEST WHEAT PORT

Montreal, P. Q., March 25.—Montreal was North America's greatest grain shipping point in 1924, with a new record of 165,129,396 bushels handled in that year, according to a shipping report of the Canadian Pacific Railway just completed. In the first eleven months of last year Montreal handled 14,368,508 bushels more than New York, its nearest competitor, and 17,332,709 bushels more than New York, Galveston, New Orleans, Philadelphia, Boston and Norfolk, Va., combined.

CONNECTICUT BARS DECREE IN YUCATAN

New Haven, March 24.—Yucatan divorcees have no standing in Connecticut courts. This was demonstrated today when Frank B. Kimball was held for trial in Superior Court after he had tried to convince Judge

Curtis that he used no longer support his wife, Ida, because of a divorce obtained in Yucatan.

The wife testified that Kimball sent her to New Hampshire, went to Yucatan "on business," sent her $20 a week and returned with the divorce. He also offered her $5,000 to recognize it as legal, she said.

UNIONS STIRRED BY THREAT OF OPEN SHOP

Hub Building Trades' Employees Proposed Action Arouses Workmen

The declaration of an open shop policy for all building trades that have not signed a three-year working agreement by April 1, which has just been announced by Boston contractors, has stirred labor circles.

The contractors, members of the Building Trades' Employees' Association, have announced that open shop rules will be observed throughout these branches which do not agree to wages now in effect. In the trades where the unions have signed agreements, strict closed shop rules will be observed.

In December, 1923, Boston contractors declared for an open shop and shortly after announced a general wage reduction. This brought on a strike and open shop conditions prevailed for 18 months, during which the building industry was partly paralyzed.

The board of conciliators of the employers' association has issued the following statement in connection with the decision to revert to open shop methods with unorganized trades:

"In those trades where no agreements have been signed by April 1, 1925, it is ordered that all members of the Building Trades' Employees' Association, shall permit all sub-contractors to proceed with their work with such men as they may see fit to employ at no increase from the present rates of wages and where or whenever sub-contractors are unable to furnish satisfactory or sufficient men, the sub-contractors shall not be interfered with in any way or manner."

HALLOWELL TO RAISE PAGE SCHOOL FUND

Boston Committee Named to Present Appeal for Memorial Quota

New York, March 26.—Owen D. Young, president of the board of trustees for the endowment of the Walter Hines Page School of International Relations, has announced the acceptance of John W. Halliwell as chairman of a committee of Boston residents, formed to raise that city's allocation in the nationwide appeal for $1,000,000 now being conducted to found the Page School at Johns Hopkins University.

At the same time Mr. Young made public the personnel of Mr. Halliwell's committee. The members are Dr. Charles W. Eliot, Roland W. Boyden, C. F. Weed, Gordon Abbott, Victor M. Cutter, Paul E. Yip, Patrick, Louis E. Kivett, Mrs. Nathaniel Thayer, Mrs. Barrett Wendell, James J. Storrow and Edwin S. Webster.

Boston's quota in the national appeal will be a modest one, Mr. Young said, as it is the desire of the trustees to make America's contribution to the memory of our war-time ambassador as possible. Virtually every large community in the country is being asked to do its share in raising the fund.

It is hoped to terminate the appeal on May 1, Mr. Young said, when it is planned to announce complete plans for the founding of the school. Before the opening of the school term next Fall, the Page School will be formally opened and dedicated.

Contributors should make their checks payable to John W. Halliwell, chairman, and send them to him at No. 84 State street, Boston.

Divorce Separates Blind Couple Wed Since 1912

Chicago, March 26 (Universal).—A husband and wife, both sightless since birth, today decided to go their separate ways when Mrs. Clara Jodine Comstock received assurance of a divorce decree from Charles E. Comstock, superintendent of the Illinois State School for the Blind.

The couple were married in 1912. Mrs. Comstock charged her husband with physical cruelty.

MAYOR CURLEY URGES TAX LIMIT OF $12.75

Mayor Curley, as an executive session of the legislative committee on municipal finance, today demanded a tax limit of $12.75 for municipal expenditures, exclusive of the State tax and the schools. In commenting on the recommendation of the Boston Finance commission that the limit be fixed at $17.75, the mayor said: "If the period to be covered was for twelve months instead of eleven, I would have been compelled to have asked for $14." The $12.75 rate is the same as was fixed a year ago.

SAY IT WITH FINGERS AS COURT FANS GASP

"What is it, a new game or something?" gasped a spectator in Municipal Court today as he gazed toward the judge's bench, where there could be seen much waving of arms, snapping of fingers and social conversation by three excited looking individuals.

"It ain't nothing," answered another court room habitué. "It's just one deaf and dumb man arguing that another deaf and dumb man stole his hat."

And so it developed. Sam Summy was the defendant and John Molway the complainant. The case was filed when it was shown that Summy was holding Molway's watch as collateral for a loan.

Youth Lays 60 Breaks to Lure of Cabarets

New York, March 26.—The lure of cabarets was given today by Stanley Wilson, a youth, as the cause of his committing more than sixty burglaries in local apartment houses.

Wilson said he was carrying a brief case which police said he used for the double purpose of posing as a student and to hold his loot.

Wilson came here six months ago from Toronto and became a clerk at $23 a week. Then the cabarets got him.

WOMAN UNION HEAD QUITS IN LYNN ROW

Mrs. Anna Hinds, seventy-year-old president of the Lynn Riteaux of America, resigned her post at a secret meeting, it was learned today. This resignation followed an unsuccessful move by a union member to have the board demand a 15 per cent. increase from the Lynn shoe manufacturers as a means of compelling the manufacturers to abandon their idea of bringing the foot and shoe workers' union into the city.

Mrs. Hinds' resignation was preceded by a fist fight among women members, it is said. Police quelled the disturbance. More than 2,500 women compose the Riteaux' local.

GUNMAN HOLDS UP ROXBURY TEA STORE

A gray-haired gunman about six feet tall held up the Rose Tea Store at No. 248 Ruggles street, Roxbury today. Entering when Manager John Riley was alone, he locked the manager into a rear room and took $14 from his pockets. Then he started to rifle the cash register, but lost his courage and fled. The man was about fifty years old, according to Riley. He wore a brown cap and an army overcoat.

PINANAKI IS HONORED BY ASSOCIATES

Founder of Memorial Institute Feted Upon His Return From South

Nathan Pinanski, Roxbury's picturesque character and Jewish leader, was feted upon his return from the South by the congregation, Adas Jeshurun, 1315 Hill avenue, and the Hebrew Free Loan Society at the Memorial Institute.

For twenty years, Mr. Pinanski has been an active member of the congregation, assisting in the plans and projects with success. Among the achievements of the congregation while under his able supervision was the construction of a magnificent educational institution on Elm Hill avenue which is known as the Memorial Institute.

The banquet was presided over by Jacob Rabinowitz, acting president of the congregation. A glowing tribute was paid him.

At the meeting a cigarette case was presented to Mr. Pinanski by Mr. Rabinowitz. As chairman of the entertainment committee, Mr. Markell, has related approximately fifteen to the institution by benefit performances.

Speakers of the evening included Judge David A. Leuze, Coleman Elliker, master of ceremonies, Alexander Brin, editor of the Jewish Advocate; A. J. Epstein, chairman of the Adas Jeshurun; S. B. Friedman, chairman of the education committee; Ezra Goldberg, Mark Chapel, Louis Polonsky, secretary of the society; Samuel C. Kestelbaum.

Two tablets, one bearing the names of the executives of the congregation, the other the names of those who have died since the dedication of the institution, were unveiled in the lobby of the institution.

A highly successful, semi-fanciful and socially, bridge was held in the interests of the Sisters of Chovva Kadusha at the home of Mrs. Annie Daniels, No. 6 Elmsey street, Dorchester.

This society is raising a fund to be presented to Chovva Kadusha, of which it is an auxiliary. The fund is to be used for the erection of a fence to surround their beautiful cemetery grounds at Montvale.

Yov Dailed Yov, a society of young Roxbury people, are holding their second annual dance in Covenanter Hall, Temple Street, Boston, tonight. Many attractions have been planned for the evening for the committee, consisting of the Misses Edith Coppelman, chairman; Lucy Cooper, Ruth Rosen, Lillian Shapiro and Frances Silverman.

The literary group of the Boston Y. M. C. A., Junior Hadassah, will be held at the home of Miss Amy Markell, No. 22 Westminister avenue, Roxbury, tonight.

The second interesting afternoon under the auspices of Norma Loebe, 26, 11, U. O. T. B., was held today at No. 10 Huntington avenue. Henry Gideon, chairman of Temple Israel, Commonwealth avenue, spoke on "Music and the Work-a-Jay World." The principal speaker of the day was Miss Johanna Wigners of Dursburg, Germany, representative of the Women's International League for Peace, who spoke in behalf of her movement.

VETS TO HEAR AMERICAN PROGRAM

Two big groups of jazz enthusiasts, a jazz dance orchestra and a jazz band, will entertain the wounded veterans at West Roxbury hospital today in the first Boston Evening American program for the ex-soldiers.

The Jamaica Strand ballroom orchestra will open the festivities, and Art Spaulding, manager of the ballroom, who is a war hero, will chop in with a few of his specialties.

The orchestra will break out to the hospital at a limousine of the Town Traction Company, which is providing transportation at its own expense to help give the World War veterans a good time.

Hercot Hinson, one of Boston's stellar pianists will accompany Spaulding and will also play for William Marguerite Bass, Boston singer, formerly with the Metropolitan Opera Company.

Following these numbers, the jazz band from the Three Marx Brothers' show, "I'll Say She Is," will play a long series of numbers. The jazz band is expected to make a hit with the veterans as it is one of the features of the show. Although the musical comedy leaves the Majestic Theatre this weekend, the band is to stay over to play during the night and orchestra theatre.

General News-stand Sales Manager for the International Magazine Co. Inc., publishers and distributors of Cosmopolitan which is combined with Hearst's International.

For 28 years I have studied and worked on newspapers and magazines. In all that time I have never seen a publication that can compare in size, interest and value to this great April issue of the consolidated magazines, Cosmopolitan and Hearst's International—just off the press.

As manager of news-stand sales and circulation throughout the world it is to my interest to prove to you that this magazine is the incomparable magazine I say it is. It is my business to make and hold new readers every month and the best way I know to do this is to give you the magazine, to read, to keep, and let you be the judge. Therefore, I make you the offer set forth in the Gift coupon.

Why I offer you a Gift Copy

This is a bona fide offer, made for the following reason: This combination of the two greatest magazines is unprecedented. Cosmopolitan has been the finest of all fiction magazines, selling more than a million and a quarter copies at 35 cents... a greater circulation at a higher price than any of its competitors.

Hearst's International has been the most vigorous, virile and inspiring of general magazines, and it achieved the second largest 35 cent circulation in America.

There has never before been a publication comparable to this new magazine... two magazines in one now sold for the price of one. With nothing to compare it to, we have found it hard to describe. Eager for the opinion and support of a center of culture such as Boston, we make this offer of a GIFT COPY.

There is a single slight qualification to this offer. We wish these magazines, so expensive to print and distribute, to get only into the hands of those who have a real interest in fine fiction and inspirational general articles. To do this we must ask that you present this coupon to your newsdealer when you ask for your copy. You will notice that all this value comes to you for the payment of 18 cents. This small amount is necessary to limit our offer to those genuinely interested. It covers only the shipping and handling expense. Every newsdealer in Boston will honor this coupon. Take it to the nearest one now.

EDITH GOULD TELLS HOW RICH ARE EDUCATED

children is no longer the stilted affair it used to be, because candor has replaced the slightly-tipped silence. Subjects are discussed today with promptness that only a few years ago were held taboo.

One of the instructresses whom we most admired was Francis Helena Schacka, a native of Dresden, a woman of excellent refinement, voluminous knowledge and kindliest sympathies. I am now using and always will use to advantage the precepts that she so wisely imparted to me. My sister Marjorie's (Mrs. A. J. Drexel, Jr.) children are now fortunate enough to have this gifted woman as governess. This is her thirtieth year in the service of our family.

Because of the migration of the Gould family to Europe or the Caribbean, we did not retain all of the governesses. For this reason there was a goodly array of French matronages. They came and went with such frequency that the names of several entirely escape me, but of my mother's death in November of 1921, she is Madame Emma Jourdain. Not only did she teach us, but she was likewise companion to mamma and travelled with her wherever she went.

An idea of how effective a governess may be can be had from the fact that my first Italian governess, Signorina Annunziata Cingilla Maria Lombi, is now Mrs. Kingston Gould. This unusual marriage caused my mother much sorrow because she had held such high hopes for Signorina. Her ideal mate for him was a certain blonde, blue-eyed belle who was a friend of our sister, Marjorie.

In addition to these teachers, there was always in the household a trained nurse to act as right on matters of health. There was also present a violin teacher for the special benefit of George, who, before he was five years old, showed great talent on that instrument. This teacher stayed with us until George went to the Browning School in New York at which time he came under the tutelage of Mr. Henry P. Schmitt, a great artist on both the violin and piano and for a lengthy period first violin of the Philharmonic Orchestra of New York.

If George had been a poor boy, I believe he would have become a violinist of great importance, ranking with Kreisler, Miska Elman or Khebelik. This was his consuming ambition, but when he voiced his desire to devote his life to music, my father objected so strenuously that George reluctantly gave up the idea of becoming a professional violinist and studied law as my father directed.

As I said in the previous chapter, lessons were given outdoors whenever the weather permitted, so that the children did not suffer headaches from stuffy rooms, and were fresh to go from lesson to lesson. There was a school room in the house in which we kept our books and equipment and where we studied when it either rained or snowed.

The school day began at nine and lasted until one o'clock when we had luncheon in the nursery dining-room. These repasts were not all play because each day we found on the table a placard that read "Speak French" or "Speak German" and we were never permitted to use English while eating. These meals were always conducted with great formality, especially when my grandmother, Mrs. King-don, a grande dame of the old school, was present.

Further facts about the education and diet of the children will be given in the next article.

GAMBLING LOSS SUIT DENIED BY COURT

Action, Brought Under Old Statute, Not Brought in Good Faith, Is Ruling

Taunton, March 25.—John F. Hennessey, alleged proprietor of a gambling house at the Anawan House in Rahoboth, will not have to pay back any funds as the result of losses that may have been suffered at roulette in the Anawan House by Edward T. Hannon, disbarred New Bedford attorney.

Under an old statute, George H. Schumm of New Bedford sued Hennessey for $15,000, claiming that Hannon lost $25,000. The law permits an outside party to bring suit for three times the amount of gambling losses suffered.

Richard P. Coughlin, appointed auditor in the case, filed his report, holding that the suit was not brought in good faith, but was instituted for the benefit of the disbarred attorney.

VICTORY SEEN FOR 'DRUNKEN DRIVER' BILL

Senate Opposition Weakens as House Votes Measure, 200 to 24

The opposition in the Massachusetts Senate to the so-called "drunken driver bill" is believed today to be dwindling away, as a result of the overwhelming vote by which the bill passed the House.

Senators who a week ago were loud in their denunciation of the bill and of the campaign of Registrar of Motor Vehicles Frank A. Goodwin, designed to drive drunken motorists from the road, are now clamorous today.

The bill, which passed the House on final rollcall by 190 to 34, will come before the Senate for a vote early next week. The principal feature of the bill is that it provides for a jail sentence for drivers convicted for second or subsequent offenses of driving while intoxicated.

The bill makes it mandatory for the judge to impose the jail sentence, and also provides that the court must secure the records of all drivers charged with intoxication from the registrar of motor vehicles.

try this New Soda Cracker

CUPBOARDS are better bare than filled with many things that children shouldn't have, but these new Sunshine Soda Crackers are certainly not on the black list, for they are not just fillers—they are real food. They furnish the bodily energy that children burn up as they grow.

It is not strange that they want crackers with jelly, crackers with milk, crackers with peanut butter, etc., for it is combinations like these that give them the balanced food they crave. Notice that these plump crackers come to you in a special shape, and that they are baked in a new way.

A real energy food—this Full Grain Process Soda Cracker!

Nowadays sensible folks seem to be avoiding trick health foods and are coming back to common-sense eating. It is surprising how really good the normal old time diet really is for replenishing brain or brawn.

Hull Plates on Los Angeles
Eaten Away by Dripping of Calcium Chloride

Lakehurst, N. J., March 26.—Damage, which it is believed cannot be repaired before mid-April, was suffered by the giant naval dirigible Los Angeles on her trip to Bermuda last month. It was learned today, several of her duratium hull plates, corroded when calcium chloride used to prevent her water ballast from freezing on her southern voyage dripped on them, will have to be replaced before it will be safe to release the airship aloft again.

2 NEEDED MOTHERS OFFER BABIES TO RICH FOLK

Cleveland, O., March 26.—Suffering mother love to give their children a better opportunity in life, two Cleveland mothers have offered to give away their babies.
One mother has succeeded.
The other baby is still on the market.
The mothers offered their babies to "any reliable persons who will love them and give them a real chance in life."
Both babies are children of couples with meager incomes.

SEES FORCES OF LIFE IN REBELLION

New York, March 26.—A suggestion that the low-birth nations of the world form a new League of Nations to oppose nations with a high birth rate was made at the opening of the sixth International Neo-Malthusian and Birth control conference. Delegates from a dozen countries crowded the rooms in the McAlpin Hotel, where Dr. C. V. Drysdale, of London, president of the conference, and Margaret Sanger, president of the American Birth Control League, delivered the opening addresses.
Dr. Drysdale, who was president of the first birth control organization in England in 1878, said: "The Neo-Malthusian remedy for war is simple. We say to each nation:—

"Limit your families to your present resources. Enter into friendly alliances with those nations which are adopting the same course to defend yourself against the high birth rate, aggressive nations."
"Already practically the whole of Western Europe, the United States and the British Dominions have reduced overpopulation to the point where an effective beginning can be made with this policy."
"United, they could present such a powerful combination against the high birth-rate nations as to render attack impossible."

Asserting that birth control did not mean race suicide, Dr. Drysdale declared that a declining birth rate had been accompanied by an increase in the duration of life.
Dr. Drysdale endorsed Margaret Sanger, saying: "She unites in herself the characters of Joan of Arc and the Florence Nightingale of the birth control crusade."

Mrs. Sanger launched into a vigorous denunciation of conditions in America, saying: "America is headed for a biological smash-up because we have no biological traffic laws."
"While the United States shuts her gates to foreigners, no attempt whatever is made to discourage the rapid multiplication of undesirable aliens and natives within our borders."

Messages from George Bernard Shaw and Havelock Ellis were read. Shaw said: "Birth control should be advocated for its own sake on the general grounds that the difference between voluntary, rational, controlled activity and any sort of involuntary, irrational, uncontrolled activity is the difference between an amiable and a man; and if we really believe that the more highly evolved creature is the better, we may as well act accordingly."

SHEBO

A Virile, Human Story of a Girl of Today

The Story Thus Far

J. M. HARDMAN owned the house at Ryeonck. Mrs. Nancy Adams lived in it. Overnight, Barbara Brown found herself strangely mistress of the house. Hardman summoned Barbara's landlady and whispered certain instructions to her. Then Kurt Schreier came to the house to talk over his symphony poem, only to find that Mrs. Adams was gone. Barbara wrote to her father in the South Sea. Nan's husband stole the letter. Hardman takes Barbara to an all-night cabaret.

Very deliberately he lifted her inert hand, palm up, and planted a kiss at the intersection of two lines.

"AM Miss Brown." She talked to one eye and a patch of unshaven face. "In Mrs. Adams here!" If the answer should be "Yes," she'd run to her car and get away. But the door slammed "No!" in her face. Angry she snatched at the knocker and just missed catapulting herself through the door as it opened again.

"But Mr. Adams is." The gatekeeper was male. Apparently he had caught a glimpse of Barbara. Again her dazzling smile had won.

"Please tell him Joe Brown's daughter begs him to forgive her, but she must speak to him immediately." She gave the eyes in the door-crack her most winning smile. "Joe Brown's daughter—don't forget."

The door swung violently open. Barbara, advancing cautiously, encountered nothing. From behind the door came a husky voice.

"I ain't fit to be seen, please. Go into the room on the left."

She did as she was bid. In the uncarpeted hallway behind her she heard clumping of feet in loose footgear. Her message was on its way. She was glad of a moment or two in which to rest. Her spirits went higher. She had only the male to deal with. And the male—plumb!

She looked about her. She had never seen so masculine a room. The rude, timbered walls were muffled with pine knots. Over the boulder-and-mortar mantelpiece, in the half

Prince Starts Saturday on Voyage to Africa and South America

London, March 26.—It is probable that the Prince of Wales will visit the United States this Summer while en route home from South America.

It is not arranged nor decided, it may be arranged, an official of the Prince's household told International News Service today. It is understood the Prince wants to see Mrs. Belmont's invitation to a guest at her home at Newport. He also desires to visit other friends he made on Long Island last Summer.

The Prince's schedule allows him three weeks for his return from Argentina. It is likely he will stop at Jamaica and then proceed to the United States, stopping there several days.

Numerous threatening letters have been received by David Kirkwood, Labor member of Parliament from Scotland, because of his criticism of the journey which the Prince of Wales is about to take.

Kirkwood repudiated the letters to the House of Commons. He said the letters were a hoax. He said he had not received any letters of that kind.

Police searched for a letter from Kirkwood, but he refused it.

TOOK HINGES OFF. After questioning, the police learned Perkins had run away from home, one of his companions had escaped from the Lyman school, and the third was also a runaway from home.

The boys were locked up and their parents were notified. During the night, Perkins, using a pocket knife, removed the screws from the hinges on the door of his cell, and when an opportunity presented itself, attacked the watchman. The boy took the loaded automatic revolver from a desk in the jail.

PRINCE'S CRUISER CAPABLE OF STEAMING AT 33 KNOTS

Plymouth, Eng., March 26 (A.P.).—Everything is in readiness aboard H. M. S. Republic for the Prince of Wales' voyage to South Africa and South America, beginning Saturday.

Only the best of officers and men have been chosen to accompany the Prince, and every day life on board while Wales' standard is at the foremast will be a display of rigid discipline and efficiency.

When other craft will dip their flags in salute they will be seeing the Prince of Wales' standard, a power—a fighter 14 feet long, 10 feet wide, carrying a main battery of a 15 inch gun and a crew of 150 men with extensive capable of handling the whole mass through the water at 33 knots.

The Prince's quarters on the Republic will contain principally a gymnasium, bath and smoking room, and a billiard room. The most attention has been paid to the gymnasium. "Anything will do for sleeping quarters," the Prince said, "but I want a complete gymnasium handy."

NEATNESS AIDS IN CROSSWORD PRIZE RACE

Another Race Gives 48 Hours to File Answers With Boston American

Several fans who have taken up the Boston Evening American's daily crossword puzzle tournament recently have asked about the rules governing it.

For the benefit of new comers the crossword puzzle editor wishes to repeat that prizes are awarded to the persons whose solutions are not only correct but NEATLY arranged.

Forty-eight hours following midnight of the day on which a puzzle is printed is the time limit allowed for getting solutions to the American office. In other words, if the solution to the puzzle in today's paper reaches the American office in an envelope with a postmark not later than midnight of next Saturday it will be eligible for a prize.

Although fans may use any kind of paper they wish in making out the puzzle it is necessary to send a solution from the American. Those who prefer may use the puzzle printed in the American. Many fans like to use their own paper instead of the form printed in this newspaper.

Contestants are not limited to the winning of one prize. Many have asked about that. Several have won more than one prize. Some have won a small prize first and then a larger one later. It is not necessary to send solutions to such an extent that they have landed first prize.

SHEPHERD WILL NOTED SLEUTH AWAIT TRIAL IN CELL OPENS OWN AGENCY

Chicago, March 24.—William D. Shepherd, a motion picture actor, was arrested by Judge Jacob Hopkins, on a charge that he had killed William W. McKinley, has millionaire ward, by feeding him typhoid germs.

The prosecution regards Judge Hopkins' decision as a great victory. Robert E. Crowe, State's attorney, said today. He pointed out that the prosecution would be pushed with even greater vigor.

"It is plainly a hanging case," he said.

Elbows in Legs
St. Joseph, Ariz., March 24.—Doctors here today marveled at the baby born to Mrs. J. M. Valenzuela. They say its legs have perfect elbows instead of knee joints.

Among the more famous cases handled by Mr. Murray was the arrest in 1910 of Herman G. Spencer, who was electrocuted for murder; recovery of $25,000 worth of jewelry stolen in 1911 at Winthrop, Canada, from the Countess of Antrim; and the arrest of the thief, recovery of $125,000 worth of whiskey certificates and money, stolen in 1916 from Timberlake and Small, in a Dorchester safe blowing job, and the arrest of the thieves. In 1916 he captured Edward Thacker, who robbed the National Shannock Bank of $25,000 in bonds; rounded up thieves who robbed the Standard Savings Bank of $50,000 in bonds in 1917; arrested Albert Taylor for the murder of Virginia Walker at Springfield in 1917, and solved the mystery of a woman in a Columbus avenue lodging house in 1920, causing the arrest of Paul Pappas, who died in the electric chair.

He recently handled successfully the dinner diamond store holdup and the Kaka Brothers and O'Brien for robbery, the whole totaling $200,000.

FINDS BABY AFTER HE HAD BURIED "HIS CHILD"

West Frankfort, Ill., March 24.—Jerry Sullivan has found a two-year-old baby living after burying another child as his own. Sullivan had identified the body of a child in the morgue and it was buried on Monday. The buried child is believed to have been that of Henry Barnes, which is missing.

ANTI-AIRCRAFT GUNS PROVE FIZZLE

Miss Targets, but Nearly Hit Planes, According to Officers

Aboard U. S. S. Concord, off San Pedro, Cal., March 25 (A.P.)—Forty-four anti-aircraft guns on the eleven dreadnaughts in twenty rounds of firing during practice failed to hit the eight planes targets towed by airplanes about 600 feet altitude according to officers of the U. S. S. Annapolis, airplane tender.

Seventy miles off shore the dreadnaughts traveling at a speed of eight knots twenty and a half miles an hour out loose with all the gun power they had.

The anti-aircraft batteries spent their incessant salvoes of fifteen rounds possible while the machine guns streamed their volleys of steel ball, each delivering 400 half-inch shells a minute.

Low statement that the anti-aircraft batteries firing of twenty rounds from forty-four guns of 15-battle fleet failed to register a hit on the eight aerial targets towed by planes made by Lieutenant Commander James I. Strong of the aircraft squadrons of the battle fleet.

"We missed the targets but nearly hit a couple of our airplanes that were towing them," he said.

The actual results of the salvoes are confidential secrets of the Navy, but it was made public by a confidential source, who said that the accuracy of the targets would have annihilated the fleet, they reported.

Children, 4 and 9, Found Intoxicated Near Home

New York, March 26.—May Benson, nine years old, and her brother, Henry, four, were found unconscious outside their Brooklyn home, suffering from alcoholism, according to the diagnosis of Dr. Thomas Larkin of St. Catherine's Hospital, where the children were taken.

May was left in charge of four of the children in the Benson family when her mother took the youngest child to a hospital in Manhattan for treatment. Police and hospital authorities have been unable to learn where the child got the liquor which she and her brother drank.

Bomb Hits Seven Fascists $10,000 Fire on Farm

Levee, Italy, March 25 (A.P.)—Seven Fascist militiamen were killed and six others seriously wounded by the explosion of a bomb hurled by Italian troops of the Italian Air Force here with an estimated loss of $10,000.

"I don't like him who refuses to change. I don't like the foolish of mankind. Men who play around with their own feelings, and then, Channoy, who take nice looking males out right after night."

She looked at him and smiled sedately.

The League Court Is Only Another Trap for the U.S.

The League of Nations' Non-Partisan Association is inducing many churches to petition Congress "not to thwart any longer the desire of the people" to see the United States a member of the International Court of Justice.

It is a false petition, because it states what is untrue. The Permanent Court of International Justice! Do the signers of the petitions realize that the court functioning under that name is, in any ordinary sense, no court at all; that it has in it neither a basis of law nor a guarantee of justice; that it is in its origin and its procedure and its decisions as remote from an American court as one institution can well be from another?

In an American court a man is safeguarded at every step against unjust treatment. There is the Constitution of the United States to safeguard his inalienable rights. There is, besides, the Constitution of the State in which he lives. There is a vast mass of written law to guide and restrain the court in passing on his case. There is a jury of his peers, if he wishes it, to act as a check upon the prejudice or unreason of the Judge.

There is a Court of Appeals if he feels that he has been wronged in the lower court. There is a Supreme Court if he feels that his life or liberty or property has been endangered in the other two courts. There is the Supreme Court of the United States if he feels that his constitutional rights have been denied him. And with all these safeguards around him, the American citizen often feels that he is not sufficiently protected!

What then of the Permanent Court of International Justice? In comparison with the conditions in an American court, what are the safeguards that would be thrown around this nation's rights, if this nation were to join it and plead a case before it?

Would America have any bill of rights to protect her, as the Constitution of the United States protects the humblest American citizen? She would not. There would be no Constitution—State, national or international—that would apply.

Would America have any written code of law to guide or restrain the Court? She would not. Or any jury of her peers? She would not. Or any court of appeals to right an unjust decision? She would not. Or any Supreme Court to rescue her from unjust jeopardy? She would not.

After submitting a foreign controversy to the World Court and going to trial, America would be bound to accept the decision whatever it might be—accept and carry out the decision or take the consequences prepared for her by Albania, Czechoslovakia, Greece, Abyssinia, India, Egypt and their associates in the League of Nations. For, the so-called World Court is the legal adviser of the League, is created by the League, belongs to the League, and if decisions ever are to be enforced, they must be enforced by the League.

Have these facts and possibilities ever occurred to the men and women who sign the petitions to Congress? Has it ever occurred the Jamieson Y. M. C. A., the Worcester Chamber of Commerce, or of the churches of Perry, Ohio, or the pastors' association of Ohio, or the "sundry citizens" of Humboldt and Rochester and Riverport or those who are like-minded as regards the World Court—has it ever occurred to them that they are asking the United States to submit the vital interests of the greatest nation on earth to the jurisdiction and decision of a bench of foreigners to whom, under conditions, which no man in his senses among all the signers would be willing to submit a single case in which his individual life, property or liberty was at stake?

Has it ever occurred to them that they are begging the Senate to subject an American population of 113,000,000 to a peril and jeopardy which no one of them would invite or tolerate for himself or his family or close associates?

Has it ever occurred to them that, by binding America to this court which is not a court, the Senate of the United States would be formally and voluntarily pledging this country to risk its wealth, its future fortune and its destiny in a manner that no prudent father would hazard the welfare of his family?

Of course not! Of course, none of these things has occurred to the good men and loyal women who signed the petitions. Some of them signed in a fit of emotion. Some signed under the delusion that they were protesting against war. Many, perhaps most of them, signed because they were asked to sign. How many of them know just what the so-called court would mean to the United States? Probably not one in ten.

But, even if the United States joined the so-called Court, it would not be obliged to submit a controversy to the bench of judges! That is the usual argument on the other side. It means that we should apparently go in, but in fact stay out; that we should make the gesture, and then refuse to make the gesture good; that we should go in with a mental reservation, and when the time came to act up to our professions, we should shrink, wince, repudiate our fine words and refuse to arbitrate or try the case.

A more contemptible policy was never imagined! A more dangerous program was never urged upon a great people! It is impossible—unthinkable! If we are in, we must go along with the rest. There is, there will be, no escape. To count upon any escape would be national dishonor. Once in, the United States is entangled, and its rights, its safeguards, perhaps its whole destiny must be submitted now and then to the decisions of whom—in the interpretation of a treaty regarding Japanese immigration, for example—to the decision of whom?

Messrs. Bustamante of Cuba, Finlay of Great Britain, Loder of Holland, Barbosa of Brazil, Nyholm of Denmark, Weiss of France, Almeida of Spain, Anzilotti of Italy, Huber of Switzerland, and probably Yovanovitch of the Serb-Croat-Slovene State and Chung-Hui Wang of China!

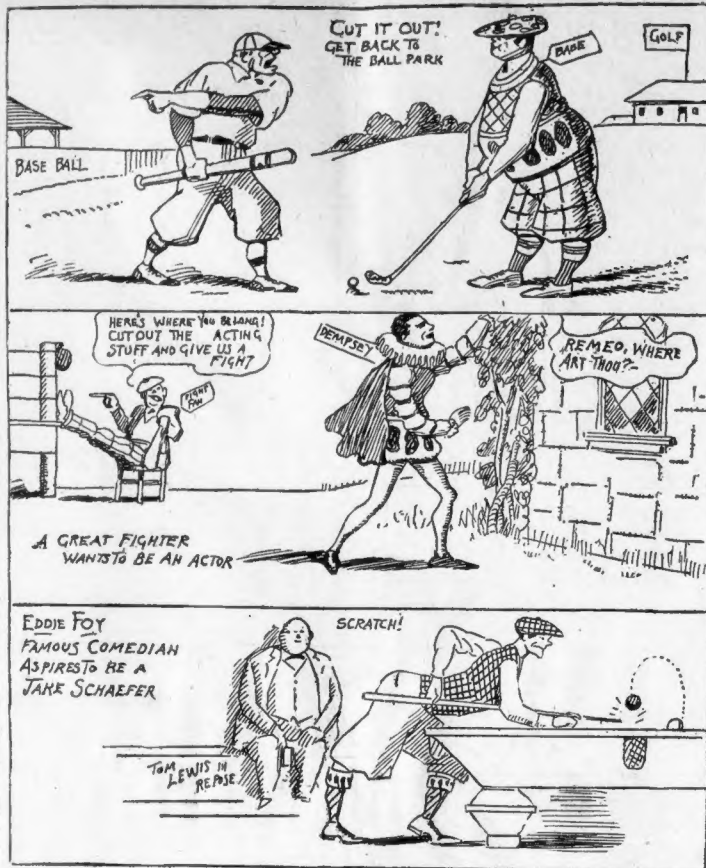

There is the picture—all honorable gentlemen, no doubt, but are they competent to understand and decide America's destiny, to pass on the Monroe Doctrine, to regulate the gates that guard American citizenship?

Can anybody imagine a Washington, a Jefferson, a Lincoln, a Cleveland leaving such decisions to a foreign tribunal? Can anybody imagine an American President of any day, up to 1913, looking upon such a course with any other sentiment than abhorrence?

Can any American today, who still has faith that this great Republic is endowed with a supreme mission in the world and a sovereign destiny to its own people—such an American today forecast the scene in his mind's eye without shrinking from the possible perils and national disasters that lurk in the background?

MRS. SOLOMON SAYS

By HELEN ROWLAND

How oft, oh my daughter, shall I tell thee how to delight the heart of a man?

For lo, be ye young or old, cave man or shiek, Don Juan or Don Quixote, there is but ONE way in all the world to charm him!

Go to, Art thou seized with that simple impulse to telephone him, without reason and without provocation?

Then, clasp Helen Rowland's thin hands and seal thy lips, Yes, I charge thee, let him ALONE!

Art thou tempted to write him scolding notes, and to share with him thy "brilliant thoughts," that thou mayest appear witty and clever in his eyes?

Then I say unto thee forever, oh Foolish One! Yes, LET HIM ALONE! Art thou filled with curiosity and the urge to question him concerning his comings and goings, his ways and his byways, and the famelic wherewith he amuseth himself?

Oh, hold thy tongue and smother thy words, Beloved, LET HIM ALONE! Art thou tempted with the desire to charm him with home-cooking and to invite him for dinner and luncheon and tea and tete-a-tete?

Rather, let him feed upon doughnuts and starve upon canned beans, all the days of his life.

See, LET HIM ALONE! Dost thou long to delight him with gifts, with soft cushions and hand-made cravats, with valentines, and Christmas gifts, and birthday offerings?

Restrain thy temper and swallow these words, though they suffocate thee.

Let him ALONE! Dost thou say in thine heart: "Lo, I shall SURPRISE him! Yes, I shall drop in upon him, at his office to-day, and delight his eyes with my new Spring raincoat?"

YET—HIM—ALONE! Go to, Be not deceived by false prophets, who say: "It is the fashion to pursue men; and only the encircling snail captures him!"

For, today, yesterday, and forever, There is but one way to capture any man's heart—which is not to TRY! BELAH!

THE RHYMING OPTIMIST

By Aline Michaels

I CAN'T tell my thoughts go back to garden plots today, go winging down time's vineless tendrils to pink in prim array, to pansies and forget-me-nots, to rue and hollyhocks, to daffodils in sunny spots that dance on slender stalks. Some music has enlured my thoughts with every growing thing, and as I say: "The trick is wrought by cunning arts of spring!" I can't tell why this restlessness should vex my peace today, this hunger for the wild's carmen and roads that wind away, this three to venture into the unknown, to roam and sing, this kinship with the morning star, "all these awake with spring!" I can't tell why love's shining dream should come to crown the king upon the glory and the gleam are but a part of spring.

WORDS OF THE WISE MEN

The most difficult thing in life is to know yourself.

It is to the soul like fire to combustible matter; it assimilates before it destroys it.

It is not point of wisdom for a man to beat his brains about things impossible.

There is no study that is not capable able of delighting us after a little application to it.—Pope.

Imitation is the sincerest of flattery.

It is one thing to make an idea clear and another to make it attractive to the imagination.

Superstition makes a man a fool and skepticism makes him mad.

UNEVEN BRICKS CAUSE TROUBLE IN WORLD

By DR. FRANK CRANE

IT is essential that a road should have a smooth surface.

A brick sticking up or a brick sticking down is equally faulty.

Bricks that sink below the surface are called "thank'ee m'rms." Bricks that stick up are called "asses' backs"—dod's dan.

Those whose individuality is pronounced are the bricks that stick up. These cause a good deal of trouble in the world, sometimes unnecessary and sometimes helpful.

On the contrary, there are people who seem to have no individuality. They are mere depressions. It is as annoying to meet these people as to meet those whose personality is pronounced.

It was said of McKinley that he was agreeable to everybody and his main capacity was for getting along smoothly with all classes.

On the contrary, President Wilson was a brick that stuck out. He had too much individuality.

A girl is popular when she presents a uniform surface. She must not know more than a man, nor be richer than her husband, nor smarter than those around her. If she is, she arouses the inferiority complex. She may be envied, but she will not be liked.

In one of the recent musical comedies a business woman wanted to succeed in society. She wondered why she was not more popular than most men. She had taught this man to play golf and that man to play chess, and helped people generally. Her grandmother told her that she must not have the air of knowing more than a man. If she continued her remarks to three—"Yes," "No," and "Aren't You Wonderful!"—she would get along much better. In fact she would have them eating out of her hand before a week was over.

She adopted her grandmother's advice and the results were satisfactory. Every man thought she was a remarkable girl because she could say "Yes!" so charmingly.

It behooves most of us to conform in most things. A man wears a suit of clothes like other men, not because he has no personality, but because he does not want to quarrel over the question. It is not worth while.

He saves his energy to concentrate upon more important subjects than clothes. Hence he is well dressed in the sense of being dressed like everybody else.

Of course there are times when a man must express his own opinions and stand by his principles, but one should not be too pronounced unless he has made sure that it is all worth while.

Most things are not worth quarreling about. It is better to let them go than to raise an issue.

LOOKING FORWARD

JAMES T. WILLIAMS, JR.

Editor, Boston Evening American.

Copyright by Harris and Ewing, Washington, D. C.

FROM its foundation twenty-one years ago, the Boston Evening American has endeavored at all times to be ready for "the supreme test of good journalism" by "making the measure of its public service" the measure of the paper's opportunity.

It has grown up to be a metropolitan newspaper with a regional influence. Its ambition is to grow into a New England institution.

Never was the Boston Evening American a paper for the Democrats, Republicans, or Independents of New England and it never will be.

It has always been a paper made for the New England people, giving unbiased news of all creeds and parties.

It will go forward in that tradition, quickened by the pride of its achievement.

Independence, sincerity, truthfulness, and accuracy must distinguish the newspaper that would command the respect of the New England public and the confidence of the newspaper readers of the region. These, therefore, are among the traits of character the Boston Evening American strives to cultivate.

By being first and fair and impartial, frequently exclusive and always thorough in its presentation of the news, the paper seeks leadership in the news field. To this end it will in the future as in the past avail itself of the latest and best in news and picture gathering and transmitting instruments such as the telephone devices for the forwarding of pictures over vast spaces in minutes rather than days.

It offers honest interpretation of the news, stimulating to the minds of thoughtful people.

In its principles and policies, the goal of the Boston Evening American's endeavor is more and more to command respect as a New England newspaper with a national vision and an American point of view.

ONCE-OVERS

DON'T BE AN OPPORTUNIST ON THE SLIP

So you are one of the "slip" birds—all fair and square as long as you are watched, but ready to put one over at the slightest chance.

Now there is a great difference between being "slip" and being an opportunist.

The opportunist is always ready to pick up the reins whenever and wherever they are dropped by the other fellow and carry things along.

But the opportunist is not necessarily a slip or dishonest person.

It is a wonderful thing to be so constituted that you can see your opportunity when it comes. It is still more wonderful to be ready for opportunity when you need it face to face.

Many a person is always standing something which is not expected, and taking advantage of the unwary to put over the thing planned.

Think of an aviator when you say "slip"—something sinister, covered and ready to jump at just that moment to give him an unfair advantage.

Take any opportunity, carrying this trait to excess till it becomes an obsession.

Don't be the bird that seizes its opportunity on the slip.
